Summary

I'm a Logical and result-driven Front-End Developer dedicated to building functional applications that look good and perform well. Since I started this journey on learning how to code I knew right away that this is exactly what I want to do. I'm very passionate, I like learning new things about programming and really dive deep in new technologies that I'm researching. I also like to learn about technology in general, I find this field very interesting. In the future I see myself as a Full-Stack developer with a very wide pallet of skills.
